

ABSTRACT

A method of detecting endpoint of a plasma etching system that measures the DC voltage drop across both the sheath and the film being etched. When the film is nearly removed, a drop in voltage 5 indicates thinning of the film which detects endpoint for etching before optical emission techniques. The voltage drop is measured across resistors within the matching network.